4. CONCLUSION It will be wrong to say that none of the Gandhian principles holds significance in present times. The emancipation of mankind from the evils and ills of contemporary lives seems to depend on some of the key principles propagated by Gandhi. Gandhi and his philosophies are always more than we know. His political contributions offered us freedom, but his philosophies and principles enlighten our lives. Perhaps this was clear to Rabindranath Tagore and that is why he named Gandhi as Mahatma meaning a great soul. The influence of Gandhi on the course of human history is almost without a parallel. It is rightly said that Gandhi belongs not only to Indian but to the whole world; he is not only of our times but all of all times and he will continue to have relevance throughout the coming ages.
