The programme emphasized the fact that In today's world, where misinformation and fake news proliferate, Gandhi's emphasis on truth is more relevant than ever. Mahatma Gandhi was not only a political leader but also a symbol of moral values. He believed in truth, non-violence, compassion, and humility. Gandhi believed in the power of truth and always spoke his mind fearlessly. He believed that non-violence is the greatest force for good and it can bring about lasting change in society. He lived a simple life with respect for all forms of life. One of the most important moral principles he addressed was self-discipline or 'self-rule'. True freedom comes from within when one has complete control over one's own thoughts and actions. He highlighted the importance of equality among all individuals. He didn't believe in caste, creed or religion. He fought against untouchability and discrimination against women throughout his life. Mahatma Gandhi's morals were deeply rooted in spirituality. True spirituality is considered as an essential part of human existence. His teachings are still relevant today as we struggle to live together harmoniously in diverse societies around the world. Humanity needs to strive to remove its ethical imperfections in order to be able to live with global challenges. In an age of increasing "Globalisation of selfishness", there is an urgent need to understand and practise the moral leadership of Mahatma Gandhi.
