Introduction:

Every person has dignity and value. One of the ways that we recognize the fundamental worth of every person is by acknowledging and respecting their human rights.

Human rights are a set of principles concerned with equality and fairness. They recognize our freedom to make choices about our lives and to develop our potential as human beings. They are about living a life free from fear, harassment or discrimination.

Human rights can broadly be defined as a number of basic rights that people from around the world have agreed are essential. These include the right to life, the right to a fair trial, freedom from torture and other cruel and inhuman treatment, freedom of speech, freedom of religion, and the rights to health, education and an adequate standard of living.

These human rights are the same for all people everywhere – men and women, young and old, rich and poor, regardless of our background, where we live, what we think or what we believe. This is what makes human rights ‘universal’.

Conclusion:

In all area we have not been able to create a support to a woman within her own community or made the man accountable for his actions in the neighborhood, home, travelling or a workplace. There are neither shelters nor houses; neither jobs nor training programs which have been evolved keeping in mind the special needs of a 'battered' woman. The campaign for legal changes have resulted in cosmetic changes that are totally inadequate to provide relief or to act as deterrent.
